Art Unit: 2836

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-5 and 13-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bernstein et al in view of Lane.

Bernstein teaches an apparatus for limiting inrush current that includes an AC source 10 connected to a diode bridge 12 for supplying converted power to a load, and is said to include an inrush limiting circuit between the diode bridge and a capacitor bank 22 (shown by a single capacitor). Once the capacitor bank is fully charged, an IGBT 36 switches the rectified line voltage to a load (see abstract).

The device taught by Bernstein differs from the claims by not using resistors in combination with a plurality of capacitor elements to suppress transients across the load. Lane teaches a shaft voltage suppression circuit that includes a first and second set of capacitor/resistor combinations connected across the load. The device taught by Lane also includes a diode bridge connected to an AC source.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the teachings of Lane into the teachings of Bernstein to meet the claims because both teachings condition AC power into DC for supply to a load by using diode bridges, with Lane teaching that it is well known in the art to use capacitor/resistor combinations in the above mentioned type of conditioning arrangement to suppress surge voltages.

Claims 6-12 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The use of a dual element time delay fuse, phase loss relays and a phase loss reset arrangement in combination with the device of claim one is not taught or suggested by the prior art of record.
